

Freelance trainers

Responsibilities

- q You will be able to deliver at least one of Family Rights Group's advertised training courses to a very high standard; and/or
- q You will expand the training programme offered by Family Rights Group by developing and delivering new courses on behalf of Family Rights Group.

Specification

You will have:

- q An understanding of and commitment to Family Rights Group's aims;
- q A qualification as a lawyer or social worker with three years post qualification experience of public law / children and families work, or
- q Experience as a Family Group Conference Manager or Co-ordinator with three years experience; or
- q Work experience which would provide a comparable level of expertise;
- q Experience of training front-line and senior practitioners; and
- q An ability to:
 - demonstrate knowledge and understanding of the way in which discrimination impacts on different minority ethnic families and on men and women as parents, and apply this knowledge in delivering training;
 - work to the required timescale and standard;
 - liaise with external agencies who are funders of a project, purchasers of a service or partner agencies working with Family Rights Group;
 - demonstrate a detailed knowledge and understanding of the Children Act 1989, Human Rights Act 1998 and the Adoption and Children Act 2002 and current policy and practice in the areas of childcare and child protection;
 - communicate clearly both verbally and in writing;
 - develop positive relationships with people from a range of organisations and backgrounds; and
 - organise own work, to keep to deadlines and negotiate competing priorities.